Rocky Mountain Horse Association
25th Anniversary

President's Corner

March, 2011

Have just come in from the barn, a mare is waxing and I braided her tail—know it's not essential, but it was a good time to think about a topic of my complete choice just like when mowing ground you know well. Not surprisingly, I thought about the RMHA.

We have daffodils that are blooming now on three old home sites on our place and they are completely self-sustaining—no bone meal or any other attention from us. Your Rocky Mountain Horse Association does require your attention to be sustained and more importantly, your interest and participation to thrive.

Hopefully, you will listen to some of the board meeting recordings now available on the rmhorse.com website. This is only the beginning of the ability of members around the world to know firsthand what is being done, how business-like we are or aren't and the stated concerns and goals for our association as recognized by the board. You have the opportunity to influence those goals by sharing your concerns with board members and exercising your choices by voting in the upcoming election.

By the time you read this, all members who haven't renewed for 2011 should have received a written request to do so with a form enclosed to make it easy. You must
